BEAUTY BUZZ

hair APPARENT

By Amanda Eberstein

"I've worked in busy salons my whole career and wanted to create an intimate and personal experience for my clients so they would never have to feel a chaotic atmosphere," says David Pierre (above), former creative director of Frédéric Fekkai Melrose Place, of his decision to open The Hair Atelier (services from $65, thehairatelierla.com.) Tucked away on a quiet residential street in West Hollywood, the jewel-box two-chair studio was inspired by Pierre's roots growing up in the south of France, with midcentury-style furnishings, glamorous peacock feather wallpaper and a cozy outdoor terrace. "The idea was to recreate the feeling of a home or bungalow in St-Tropez during the '60s or '70s, which was the most stylish era to me," says Pierre, who caters to an equally fashionable clientele that includes "it" girls like Erica Pelosini, Alana Hadid and Mia Moretti. In addition to the owner's expert cut and styling services, the by-appointment-only salon offers color by Matthew Nolen, another Fekkai alum, and Christophe Robin products.

Child's Play

After 20 years in Mid-City, the Zimmer Children's Museum has moved to Santa Monica with a new name: the Cayton Children's Museum (caytonmuseum.com). The 21,000-square-foot facility features interactive play spaces, educational exhibits and a state-of-the-art theater.

Healthy and Delicious

Organic baby food brand Tummy Thyme (tummy-thyme.com)—previously available only at the Studio City Farmers Market and via delivery service—has launched select items at all Erewhon markets throughout L.A. The line was founded by Talia—who started making homemade meals for her own young daughter—and Jonathan Moore, and features ready-to-serve jars and signature frozen cubes made from fresh, seasonal ingredients.

Wardrobe Essentials

Beverly Hills children's boutique English Rabbit (englishrabbit.com) is celebrating its second anniversary. The elegant spot is one of the only independent shops in the United States to carry Gucci Kids. Now, co-owners Kelly Dowdy and Natalie Fuller are introducing Missoni's children's line, as well as mommy-and-me options from brands like Golden Goose and Bonbon.
